Meet Julie Tarney: Julie Tarney was born and raised in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and now lives in Brooklyn, New York. She received her B.A. in Liberal Arts from the University of Wisconsin. After a successful career building the largest public relations firm in her hometown city, working for clients like Coca-Cola, McDonald's and Harley-Davidson, Julie applied her professional expertise in strategic planning, corporate communications, and issues management to launch a personal leadership development consultancy.

As a successful businesswoman and entrepreneur, representing big corporations in diverse markets, Julie realized a common thread of confusion and misunderstandings within the organizations regarding gender identity.

Julie decided to publish a book, titled My Son Wears Heels, an open and outspoken memoir where she shared what she learned about gender identity, gender expression, and self-acceptance from her only child, Harry. Julie divulged what her journey with Harry, from gender-nonconforming toddler to nonbinary adulthood, taught her about herself. Sharing that experience, Julie has touched lives and changed hearts of many in diverse corporate and community settings.

Julie became aware that business leaders and entrepreneurs often lacked knowledge about the LGBTQ+ population and were therefore missing out on recruiting a large segment of their potential talent pool.

Today, Julie Tarney travels the country and the world as a consultant and trainer, helping hundreds of business leaders learn how to better build their employer brand by creating LGBTQ+ inclusive, welcoming, and supportive workplaces.

Despite her experience and numerous accolades, Julie remains authentic, humble, and a highly engaging speaker.
